Re: permission to reprint

The University Press of Colorado, a nonprofit educational/scholarly publisher, will publish a book of which I am the volume editor/author, to be entitled:

Book Title

which will be a work for an audience of university researchers and teachers. An initial printing of about 500 copies is contemplated, and the volume will have a 20XX copyright date.

In this work, we hope to reprint the following, for which we believe you own the rights:

title: Chapter/Article/Photo title published in: Journal/Book/Source title
date: Copyright Date

Please consider this letter a formal request for one-time nonexclusive world rights to use this material as part of our volume in all editions and bindings (cloth, paper, electronic). Would you grant permission by completing the form below and returning it by email or post?

As this is a request from a nonprofit publisher for a research and educational audience, we hope you will consider granting permission gratis. We will ensure that an appropriate credit line identifies you as the original publisher; if you would like to specify the language of the credit line, please indicate so in the space provided below.
